PUBLIC DISPENSARY.

THE General Meeting of CONTRIBUTORS to the PUBLIC DISPENSARY, for the Annual Election of Managers, is to be held on Saturday January 27, as three o'clock afternoon, in the Difpensary, Richmond-struct.

A state of the funds of the Dispensary, and of its effects, fince the last annual report, will then he laid before the Contribustors; but for the information of those who may not attend, it is thought proper to mention, that, from examining the Records of Practice at this charitable establishment, it appears, that One Thousand Two Hundred and Twenty-one Patients have been admitted to the benefits of it during the course of last year.

GENERAL STATE OF DISPENSARY PATIENTS Since the Commencement of that Charity.
Patients admitted from Nov. 7. 1776, to Jan. 1. 1797,
Patients admitted from Jan. 1. 1797, to Jan. 1. 1798,

N. B. From the state of the funds of the Dipenfary, the General Meeting, in January 1784, found it necessary to give orders, that these Patients only should be supplied with residence who were recommended by contributers. This regulation is now so far altered, that all Patients are also admitted to the benefits of the Dispensary, who are recommended as proper objects of charity by a clergyman, or the elder of the benome in which they reside. This plan is to be continued as long as the sunds of the Dispensary will permit, which, however, dependentirely upon the voluntary contributions of the benevolent.

JACKSON'S ASTHMATIC CANDY.

THE tuperior efficacy of JACKSON'S ASTHMATIC CANDY.

O's in complaints of the flomach and lungs, arising from indigestion and flatulency, has been ascertained by the experience of several years. Its peculiar success in Coughts and Colds, and in alleviating the most slarming complaints incident to persons of a gouty, relaxed or asthmatic habit, (which complaints are more particularly prevalent in the foggy and damp season of the winter months) is now universally acknowledged; and, considering it is a medicine in general use, it would have been unnecessary for the proprietor to have repeated his advertisement to often, had not some persons sately obtruded upon the Public, in a spurious medicine under the same name.

It becomes, therefore, necessary to offer this caution, by respectfully informing the Public, that the genuine Medicine is signed on the stamp by J. BARCLAY, the sole proprietor, and may be had as usual, at No. 95, Fleet Market, London, five doors from Fleet Street, in boxes at 2s, 6d, and 1s. 14d, each stamp duty included.

In consequence of the non-arrival of the Hamburgi mails, much uneafiness has prevailed for several days respecting the state of affairs on the Elbe; apprehen fions are entertained that the French influence, reigning paramount, has extended the prohibition of English merchandize, published in France, to the cities of Ham burgh and Altona—not that the failure of three mails at any other period would be considered matter of any furprize, particularly as the wind has been for fome time palt, extremely unfavourable for the failing of the

The Prince of Orange Packet has arrived from Cux haven, with an Italian mellenger, having left that place on the 1 th initant; no intelligence has, however, been received by this conveyance, except what relates to the apprehension of the people at Cuxhaven; on this ground alone it is submitted to merchants, that the shipping of goods for the Elbe should be for the present suspended.

We believe all the alarm which has gone forth on this shipest, has been occasioned by accounts originally.

this subject, has been occasioned by accounts originally received from France. Private letters from thence handed about in the city on Saturday, operate not little to depress the public mind.

It was reported on that day that Mr Frazer, our Enpears, was unfounded, hopes are therefore entertained that things are not in fo bad a state as has been represented

The following notice was on Friday fluck up as Having possessed themselves of Rome, there is little doubt but that the French will attempt an invalion of the Neapolitan dominious-their fuccess, however, must be doubtful. Naples is about 300 English miles from Rome; the passes are very mountainous and strongly defended, and the King of Naples, apprehensive of such an attempt, has strengthened to the utmost his whole frontier line, by a well disciplined army of 80,000 men. Let is reported, as a matter of certainty, (fay some letters from Manheim), that 25,000 men, under Genoral Championnet, are marched to take possession of the Electorate of Hanover. The new name given to the corps of Conde, which has marched into the Russian Provinces, in Poland, is that of "the Imperial Army of Conde." This corps does not form a part of the Russian army of the line but remains under the immediate orders of the Prince of Conde. A letter from Weymouth states as follow:-English Captain and one Lady came in the Packet from Maloes on Monday. In answer to the question, how forward the French were in their expedition for invading England? they informed, that at the above por were only four gun-boats in their frame, and had been lying so these two years; but the people of all ranks speak very much of invading this country; they also say that the English will not exchange prisoners, and we have now that all their countrymen up in close prisons, and are going to starve them.

" An English Captain was about to make his escape over the wall of the prison where he was confined; the French centinel saw him, and instantly run his bayone into his body, and in drawing his mulquet back, the bayonet behind; the Captain then fell from the wall, drew the bayonet out of his body, and thrust it into the centinel's, and they both died side by side."

VOLUNTARY SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The arrangements are now completely made at the Bank, for receiving fums on account of voluntary contributions, or in payment of affeifed taxes imposed by the late act of Parliament, or on both accounts jointly and books are now opened for these purposes, which we have no doubt will foon exhibit the most decisive and honourable proofs of public spirit and patriotism.

On Friday several dignified persons, both in church and state, fant letters to the Bank, announcing their in tention of fubscribing to the voluntary contributions.

A house of the first respectability in the city, on Sa turday folicited to be informed of the persons and sums then entered; but to each received a positive denial in consequence of orders to that effect.

The multitude, conceiving that the stake at iffue i proportioned to the property and consequence of the in dividual, naturally look for example to the higher or Many of the best disposed, ignorant of the conduct of the more opulent, apprehend that their contributions would only add to their own embarrassmentwhilft, from the delay of the opulent, suspicion and con fequent displeasure occupy the minds of the rest. The effect of example is obvious in all cases—the want of it on the present is injurious, not merely in the loss of what might otherwise be subscribed, but in impressing our enemies with an idea, that those who had most at iffue were inscassible, or unworthy of their stations; and that the public fentiment was adverse to the cause.

The cautious concealment of the fubscribers, contra ry to established usage, is attributed to a desire to conceal the omission of names, which, from every principle of general action, should have been most conspicuous.

The Conful Lavinius (A. R. 542) observed, that,
As the Magistrates were above the Lictors by their rank, and the Senators above private Citizensought they to fet them an example, when the question was to aid their country, and to take the heaviest and most oppressive loads upon themselves. If you are for finding in inferiors docility and submission, in respect to taxes and imposts, do you and yours contribute first yourselves. The expence will be less felt by the small, when they fee the great impose more upon themselves than they would be obliged to pay."

Admiral Colpoys, than whom the fervice, perhaps does not boaft a better officer, or the world a better man, and Lord Carrington, were amongst the first con-tributors. Lord Bridport and the Speaker on Saturday put down their names; but though the books have been opened fome days, the aggregate does not exceed

There has been some misunderstanding at the Bank about the interpretation of the act of Parliament. It was supposed that persons only could subscribe who paid down the whole fum which they affixed to their names. Books, however, are now opened for subscriptions to be paid by instalments, a measure more generally convenient to individuals, and equally beneficial to the State.

It has been lately fignified, from the office of the Secretary at War, to the commanders of volunteer corps, that fuch as wish for being employed in the more immediate active fervice of their country, will have a sta-tion assigned them in the eastern district, within two miles of the sea coast of Norfolk, where every thing will be provided for their accommodation.

If the French really intend to make an attempt on this country, they must be aware, that there is a great military force for its protection, far exceeding any military preparations in the days of our forefathers. It may be computed at not less than 220,000 foldiers, including the militia. How much superior this to the means of defence that were prepared in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when England was, as it is now, menaced with the inroads of a powerful and a veteran army! The whole force then collected, was as follows:

TO " SECRETS WORTH KNOWING." Written by WILLIAM THOMAS FITZGERALD, Efg. Spoken by Mr WHITFIELD.

From Dryden's period to our prefent days,
Thus Would-be-Critics censure modern PlaysSome are too dull, without intrigue or jest.
And some are fpeaking Panonimes at best.
The living authors are by dead surpast,
So we must write the worst who write the last;
Still each new Drama captiously they blame,
And though the Town be pleased, deny it fame.
Should this decision be allowed as just,
The bays, denied the bard, may grace his bust! The bays, denied the bard, may grace his buft! But if this tafte for antiques we purfue,

But if this tafte for antiques we purfue,
Age may improve wit, wine, and women too.

"Our beaux will then negleck the young and fair,

"And auburn treffes yield to heary hair.

"The blooming maid, with every charm and grace,

"The dimpled cheek, the fascinating face,

"With nature, truth, and honour by hier fide,

"This tafte may doom to be a weeping Bride!"
One old opinion we would fill maintain,
The Right that England has to rule the Main!
Long as the 6:a fhall sence our envised land,
Long as our Navy shall that sea command,
So long shall Howe', St Fineen's, Durcan's name,
Be 'grav'd, by menory, on the rock of Fame!

So long shall Howe's, St Vincent's, Duncan's name be 'grav'd, by memory, on the rock of Fame! The page of hist'sy shall their deeds repeat, With Britain's triumph, and the Foe's defeat! But, ah! the pensive Muse, with tearful eye, View's Glory's brightest triumph with a sigh! And, 'midst the shouts victorious seets attend, Mourns o'er the aftes of an honour'd friend, Who in his country's quarrel fought and bled, By England number'd with her Partiot dead—May War's alarms' trwiter rival nations cease, And all embrace that lovely stranger—Peace! Whose olive branch, once planted by her hand, Shall bleis a loyal, brave, and happy land! Shall blefs a loyal, brave, and happy land!

This night our Author's hopes on you are phen His former efforts by your finites were grac'd, To your decree, fubmissively he bends, Trusting his judges will be found his triends.

The same spirit continued to animate the troops as well as the inhabitants at large; those of the Pays de Vaud in particular had given the most unquestionable proofs of their affection and fidelity to the Government.

The French Generals, alarmed at the military appearance and enthulialm of the troops of the Canton of Bern, apprehensive also of a general insurrection in the Protestant part of the Bishopric of Basse, had withdrawn their forces from the territory of Bienne, and from the whole of the plain country, and had retired into the Jura.

The inhabitants of Bienne had displaced the Municipal officers chosen by the French, and had called on the neighbouring Cantons to guarantee their ancient rights and priviliges.

The Cantons of Zurich, Soleure, and Fribourg, had warmly approved the conduct of the Government of Bern; and there feems every reason to believe, that with the exception of Basle, all the other States will act in perfect concert with the leading Canton.

A difavowal of any hoffile intention, and fome aukward explanations of the circumstances accompanying the invasion, had been given by Mr Bacher; and it may be collected from the language of fome of the French Journals, and the total filence of others which were lately loud on the subject, that the Directory has experienced a severe disappointment on this occasion, and that it is now persuaded that its friends in Switzerland had given very false accounts both of their own frength, and of the temper and spirit of the Government and the inhabitants.

In the mean time, Switzerland continues to be inundated with French libels; the disaffected subjects, who have quitted their respective Cantons, are invited to civic feasts in the house of the new French Minister at Basle; and the whole attention of the French Government feems now to be directed to the feparating fome one or more of the Cantons from the Confederacy. In this attempt it is generally believed that the French will fucceed only with the Canton of Bafle. Since the French have obtained possession of the Porentrui, and the country called the Frichthal, (which the Austrians appear to have ceded by some secret article of the treaty of Campo Formio,) this small Canton is left entirely the mercy of the French.

We are happy in having an opportunity to lay before our readers the note that Mr Wickham delivered to the Helvetic Body on his recall. In the language and conduct which the British Minister was directed to hold upon this occasion, the world will fee a new proof of the extreme moderation by which his Majesty's conduct towards neutral nations has uniformly been guided.

Frankfort, Nov. 22. 1797.

" MAGNIFICENT AND POWERFUL LORDS, "Although your Lordships have not communicated to me the definant which the Executive Directory of France lately made to you concerning my mission, I could not, however, be ignorant of what was notorious to all Switzerland, and I in consequence deemed it my duty to communicate it to my Court, not omitting at the same time, to point out the infulting manner in which it was transmitted to your Lordships.

" In the whole of this transaction, which attacks alike the law of nations, and your amient dignity and independence, the King has not failed to observe the per-fidious intention of diffolving the ties of friendship which have at all times attached his Majesty to your States, and the premeditated plan of undermining the very founda tions of your confederacy.

" Perfuaded of this truth, his Majesty (who, in fending his Minister into Switzerland, wished to give a proof of his good will and friendship towards you), will not allow his residence there to serve as a pretext to the bottile projects of a neighbour, whose ambition respects neither justice nor the laws of sovereignty, and who is actuated with no other defire than to introduce in you happy countries that destructive system, from which, by the help of Divine Providence, you have been hitherto enabled to protect them. The King has in confequence signified his commands, that his whole mission thould withdraw from your territories without loss of time.

"In communicating this resolution to your Lord-thins. I have the King's express commendation of the commendatio thips, I have the King's express commands to affure you, that it is dictated by no other motive than his anxious folicitude for the preservation of your tranquillity; and that your Lordships may fully rely on a continu-ance of that good will and friendship which have ever formed the basis of his Majesty's conduct in all his tranfactions with your states.

" I eagerly embrace this opportunity to express to you individually, my acknowledgements for the manner in which your Lordships have been pleased to receive me during my mission, and my regret at being no longer the organ of the benevolent sentiments of my Sovereign towards you. "In offering up my fincerest prayers for the prosperity and tranquillity of your states, I have the honour

EDINBURGH-JANUARY 25.

No Hamburgh mails have arrived fince our last; they are anxiously expected especially by the mercantile in terest, who entertain very serious apprehensions as to the safety of British property in that port.

A letter from an officer in the island of Jersey, to his friend in Edinburgh, dated January 15. says:—

"We are every moment in expectation of the French landing in this island; fo much fo, that every regiment is obliged to remain under arms during the night, and take their rest in the day time. It has been reported to the Commander in Chief of this island, that there are 30,000 French troops embarked, and that there are ready thirty gun-boats and frigates, which can come over in the space of two hours, which keeps us constantly on our guard. All the inhabitants are under arms, but am afraid, if put to the trial, they will give very little affiltance."

The island of Jersey is not above twelve miles long and fix broad; it is defended by rocks and dangerous quick fands. The inhabitants are computed at 20,000, a mixture of French and English. The principal manufacture is knit stockings and caps. In the valleys are plenty of cattle and sheep; but it does not raise corn lufficient for its confumpt.

Paragraph of a letter from Captain P. C. Durham, of the Anson frigate, dated Plymouth, January 18,

" I am just arrived with the Daphne, a French frigate, which I took a few days ago, carrying 30 guns and 267 men, and having on board two commissioners for the West Indies. I have likewise re-taken three fhips.—It is fortunate, I had none hurt on board, al-though it was in the night, and I put the Anfon along-fide, the only way to do with Frenchmen. I have much fatisfaction in this capture, as the was the first ship I had the honour to command, and was the only Eng-lish frigate in possession of the enemy."

The following melancholy catastrophe took place on Wednesday evening the 17th :- As JOHN TURNBULL, tenant in Kirklands, near Hume, was returning home from Dunse on horseback, he was met, near Gavinton, by two carters driving their horses at full speed a-breast; and, the road being too narrow to admit of his escape, he was trodden down by the horses, and killed on the spot. We understand his horse was also so much bruifed that it died in a few hours .- And, a few days ago, an accident, attended with almost equally fatal confequences, occurred at Ford, in Mid Lothian: - As Mr THOMAS RIDDEL, millwright in Kelfo, was riding down the steep path at Ford Path-head, he was suddenly overtaken by a carter, driving a pair of horses at full gallop, and, before he was able to make an effort to fave himself, he was run over, and one of his legs and thighs broken and bruifed in a most shocking manner. His life is yet despaired of.

We fincerely hope, that the above melancholy confequences, of a practice as frequent as difgraceful in this country, will engage the most vigilant attention of the Magistracy in discovering the perpetrators; and that they will meet with the punishment they so richly de-

To the many fatal accidents that happen in croffing the river Findhorn, we are concerned to add, that a few days ago the boat over that river at Ardclach was overfet, and the boatman and a paffenger drowned.

FIRES.

Yesterday evening, a fire broke out in the Line Mills at Collington, belonging to Mr WATTERS, which were entirely confumed.

On Tuefday night, the great cotton-work of Mess. Wood and Co. at Carlifle, was burnt to the ground The wind was very high, so that it was with much dif-ficulty the Bush stables were faved from the stames. No lives were loft.

VOLUNTEER CAVALRY.

We are informed, that a proposal is intended to come from some of the Yeomanry or Volunteer Cavalry corps of the three Lothians, for occasionally uniting all these corps for the purpose of drill.—As such a plan would eventually render these corps much more useful to Government, we fincerely hope it may be found practicable. The numbers would amount to near 300, which would form a very respectable regiment, ready to act as fuch on very thort notice in cafe of invalion, or o internal commotion.

HIGH COURT OF YUSTICIARY.

Some time ago, Thomas Muir, day-labourer in Dalreturned a verdict finding him guilty of colpable homicide. Against this verdict it was pleaded in arrest of judgment, that no sentence could be passed thereos, as culpable homicide was not charged in the indictment. To this it was answered, that under a charge of murder, every species of homicide was included, and there-fore, that the Jary were entitled to return a verdict of culpable homicide. The question was fully stated in informations, upon which the Court, on Saturday, repelled the objection pleaded in arrest of judgment, and, in respect of the verdict, and that the prisoner had already remained long in prison, they ordained him to be re-committed to the tolbooth of Edinburgh till the 2d day of February next, and then to be fet at liberty. Counsel for the Crown, Mr Oswald; agent, Mr WARRANDER. -- For the prisoners, Mr M FARLANE, and Mr CRANSTOUN; agents, Mess. John CRAW, and

Lewis Gordon.

Arrived here, a few days ago, from Edinburgh Castle, under the escort of a detachment of the Loyal Greenock Artillery, who had handsomely volunteered their fervices for that purpole, three ammunition waggons for the battery, now called Fort Jervis, in honour of the memorable victory gained over the Spanish fleet by the gallant Earl St Vinctor. The fort is now is the most complete state of defence, has an excellent bomb proof for powder, &c. (thanks to the attention of our worthy Member, Mr M'Dowall of Garthland, Lord Lieutenant of the county) and is quite ready to give a very genteel reception to whatever part of the Army of England may wish to visit the Clyder. They may depend that the Loan will be discharged in full, by something of more weight than Republican mandatest truly loyal and parriotic corps is in the highest state of discipline—above one half of them, are trained to the use of small arms—and we make no doubt, should the enemy have the temerity to land on our coasts, they will display a spirit of gallantry in the day of battle be coming Britons.

The fort fired, on the 18th inftant, a Royal falute, in honour of her Majesty's birth-day, as did the other forces in the town, and the shipping in the Roads.

COMMISSION INTELLIGENCE.

Patrick Finney having been put to the bar, and a jury fworn, the indictment was read, which confifted of thirteen counts, detailing overt acts of high treason.

Mr Ringeway, for the Crown, opened the case, which, with his usual and acknowledged candour, was

The Right Hon. the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, who began by flewing that the prisoner, Patrick Finney, stood indicted on a charge of high treason, of which there are several species; he stated merely two, as applying to the charge—one was the compaling the death of the King, and the other, adhering to the King's

JAMES O'BRIEN being fworn and examined by the Prime Serjeant, deposed in substance, that on the a5th Prime Serjeant, deposed in substance, that on the a5th of April last, he met at the door of a public besure in Thomas street, and in company with the prisoner, Einney, a man named Hyland, with whom he was acquainted; that Hyland asked him if he was Up? the witness expressing ignorance of what he meant, Hyland said, "it's a wonder, Jamie, you're not up," and Finney explained it, to signify a person's being an United Irishman, and advised him to become one, or he might lose his life, before he went half the length of the street, and if he went into the house, he should know the and if he went into the house, he should know the particulars; the witness accordingly went into the pu-blic house, and entered a room where there were ten more persons, one of whom, named Buckley, asked the prisoner, Finney, if he had caught a bird, add ing, that he, O'Brien, should never leave that house until made a Christian.—He was then sworn to secree and also to the constitution oath of the United Irishmen by Finney and Hyland, in presence and hearing of the prisoner, who told the witness, that every man, rich and poor, who was not an United Irishman, very shortly would lofe his life. O'Brien deposed, that he took the oaths from fear of his life, after paying a shilling, fail to be for the good of the cause, he was initiated into the signs and words of the Society. The Sunday following was appointed to meet at the Widow Coghlan's, on the Coombe, where Finney faid the witness would be printed paper read, which stated, among other things, that any placeman or pensioner who was not an United Irishman should lose his life. Being permitted to depart, on his way home, he recollected, that persons en-tering into societies of Desenders were taken up, if difcovered; so he determined to inform Mr Higgins, a Magiltrate of the Queen's country, of what had passed, and did; he was advised to continue some, time in the society; went to the following meeting; at Newmarker, Coombe, and was admitted on the paffword, "Mr Greene;" at this meeting much conversation was held about their strength in men and arms; went to the Sheaf of Wheat in Thomas Street, the Sunday after, and was admitted on the password, "Mr Flail;" there were fixty persons in the room, having been counted by the prisoner at the bar, who advised a division of them into splits, each to consist of twelve; that they were accordingly subdivided, and to each split there was elected a secretary and cash-keeper; after which, Finney administered to each of the secretaries and treafurers an official oath, a man named Cooke helping each, as fworn, to a glass of punch, to wash it down. Witness recollects a proposition made at that meeting, for a certain number to go to White's Court in Ship Street, to No. 48 George's Street, and to a stone-cutter's yard in the same street, for the purpose of reporting to the next meeting, whether there were fultable places to favour an entry into the ordnance stores, that the arms and ammunition might be stolen from thence;

the arms and ammunition might be stolen from thence; that the report on this inspection was an approval of the different places as calculated to facilitate the attempt.

Witness stated, that on a Monday he went to a baronial meeting, (having been appointed a cash-keeper), accompanied by Finney; at this meeting Finney in-the net transport of a to a new it employed spessed the accounts of the cash-keepers, and received their money, flating, that he wanted it to pay menter fend, as already done, to France, to acquain the government of that country with the number of men reasons. dy to affift them, on landing in this country, and that two of the four, already fent, had commised, and the other two would come with the enemy's fleet; for shey certainly would attempt another invafion. O'Brien deposed, that at the meeting at the Widow Cochlan's, on the Coombe, it was appointed to attend a funeral from Pimblico, which would be accompanied by 10,000 United Irishmen, who took that merhod to thew Government their ffrength, and what they were $ that at this funeral Hinney was the most active person, and directed the order of marching; and that after the funeral, much money was collected, and winters faw on the table a great deal of silvers gold, and some bank notes, the produce of that collection, and money paid in to Finney from other moetings. At this meeting Finney read the confliction of the fociety of United Irishmen, and a paper, stating that 110,000 United Irishmen were in the province of Uster alone, ready to rithmen were in the province of Uliter alone, ready to affilt the French, on landing in this kingdom. At a meeting in Meath Street, wanted at posed, it was proposed to put out the eyes, and cut off the tongue and hands of any person suspected of giving information to Government against United Irishmen, and to affalfinate those of whom such could be ascertained; that it was at this meeting the guard arrived; by witness's direction, to arrest the society; but that Finney having possessed himself of the papers of the meeting; made his escape. Fire the witness's direct examination ended:

On his cross examination by Mr Cursan, the witness was asked, among other questione, if he knew a Marga-was afked, among other questions, if he knew a Marga-ret Moore; if he had ever summoned her to the Court of Conscience, and if he had arrested her in consequence of continues, and it he had arrested her in consequence of a decree; he replied, that he had fummoned har, and had her arrested, but without having obmined a decree;—he was asked, if she had not summoned him, and obtained an obser for the restoration of the money he had thus obtained from her; and in his presence.—This, in part, he admitted, and part denied. Being asked in had not extented from her admitted and part denied. ed if he had not extorted from a Patrick Cavanagh and John Clarke, publicans, under the affumed character of an excife-officer—he answered, he had; but denied that he had ever passed for an excise-officer unless he was drunk; . He also admitted having given a man named Edmond Purcel a receipt how to make copper look, like silver; at the same time giving Parcel

PETER CHARKE, examined by Counfellor Worthinga bad half crown.

PETER CLARER, examined by Counfellor Worthington, depofed, principally, that the 31st of last May, having gone acro a public house in Thomas Street, accompanied by Corporal Thompson, who was since murdered near the Naul, they saw Finney in the tap-room, who asked the witness, how he was, and if he was up to the new plan that he communicated—that he there boasted how well he contrived to escape from the meeting in Meath Street, with the papers of the Society, and that his escape was essected by being dreffed in a uniform, and having a black stock on—that while thus conversing, Thompson went for a guard, with which returning, Finney was arested.

Cross examined by Mr M Nally—He admitted that he deserted from the Carlow Buss, but it was because he had never received any bounty money, nor had taken any oath of allegiance—he also faid, that he was not in the Court the preceding day.

On the part of the prisoner, six witnesses were examined, sow of whom positively contradicted O Brien in his depolition, that he had never passed for an eneise officer, and also in the affair of summoning and arresting Mar. Moore. Of Pet. Clarke it was likewise possitively sworn, that he was in the Court the preceding day, in contradiction to his deposition.

N your paper of Monday you have published a correspondence between the American students at this University, and the French prisoners confined in the Castle.- I am not fingular in esteeming it evident that the terms in which the letter is couched do convey, (I hope unintentionally,) a fort of impeachment on the charity and justice of this country towards those Frenchmen, whose fate has lodged them in Edinburgh

The "fufferings," which these American gentle-men so feelingly bewail,—the "miserable condition," which they deplore,—the "wants, misfortunes, and diffress," which fill up the pathetic paragraphs of their letter, being mostly figurative, would, possibly, had its authors been pleased to investigate the fact, have been less frequently repeated in the letter.

It is true the objects of the present American liberality, and whom their correspondents address by the palatable epithet of "Citizens," are prisoners; but it is equally true, that their fituation, in point of attendce, food, and accommodation, is not furpaffed by the treatment of any prisoners of war in any country under the fun, nor equalled (would to God it were)

I tax not the charity of the students as ill placed I centure not their benevolence in fuccouring misfortune, wherever it meets them. But I cannot permit tions of the existence of a singular and unusual call for the exertion of that benevolence, and to the last farthing the donors can afford, to go abroad, without affuring your readers of its injustice. It may check the enthuliastic expressions at least of these Gentlemen, to recollect that most of the objects of their bounty were not captured in the act of open and manly hostility, de-plorable, no doubt, as even such war is, but in the pilfering act of privateering against the subjects of that country wherein their impassioned supporters are now living and now protected.

It is neither my purpose to admonish nor to crave. It is neither my object to correct the charities of in-dividuals, nor to solicit the next bounty of the American fludents towards those unhappy Britons, who now truly feel what captivity is, and in a land too of alledged liberty. But I call on you, Sir, in the name of justice, to publish this letter, as a due explanation to those whom your American correspondents may have impressed with the notion of severity which does not exist, and of distress which has been exaggerated. . I am, Sir,

A FRIEND TO ACCURACY.

COURT OF KING's BENCH, Dec. 21.

HOGG D. HORNER. Mr Gross opened this cafe, which was an action on a policy of infurance, brought against the defendant to recover the amount of his subscription. The insurance recover the amount of his fublicipation. The inturance was on the finip Minerva, at and from Lifbon to any port or ports in England, with leave to call at any one port in Portugal for any one purpose. This ship was chartered to carry a cargo of coals to Lisbon, and there to take in a part of her home cargo, and from thence to fail to the port of Faro, and from thence to England. She actually did fail from England to Lisbon, and the coal the carry than the coal to the port of Faro, and in her youage home was land. She actually did fail from England to Lifbon, and from thence to Faro, and in her voyage home was captured by a French privateer. Mr Gibbs fubmitted, that by this policy the Minerva had a right to call at any port in Portugal, and Faro was a port in the fouthermost part of that kingdom, and the navigation was not attended with greater risk than to Oporto, though it lay at a greater distance.

Lord Kanyon thought, that this ship going to such a distance fouth of Lisbon, and in a retrograde motion was a deviation.

Mr ERSKINE reminded Lord Kenyon of an appeal to the House of Lords from the Court of Session in Scotland. That was a policy of infurance at and from Charlestown to Holland, and the ship put in at Hull. Lord Thurlow in that case, after consulting with the Judges, held that when a ship was permitted to call or touch at any particular port, it must be a place in the course of her voyage.

Mr Ginns faid, it was evidently the intention of the plaintiff, before the policy was effected, to go to Faro, and he defired the infurance to be fo made

Lord KENYON faid, the intention of the plaintiff only was not fufficient. The defendant ought to have been apprized of it. Why did not the plaintiff infure at and from Faro ?

Mr Gibbs submitted, that his client was entitled to the return of premium.

Lord KENYON faid thought he was not, in as much as there was an inception of the the risk, the policy being at and from Lisbon. The risk, therefore, becan before the ship left Lisbon, and while she remained in the port of Lifbon, non conflat, which way she should

The Gentlemen of the Jury held it to be a deviation and of course found a verdict for the defendant.

DECEMBER 22. FRANCE U. KIRVAN.

Mr Law stated that this was an action on a policy of infurance at and from any port or ports in Jamaica to Liverpool, and warranted to fail with convoy before the 1st of August, 1795. Admiral Ford, at that time, with the Europa, and several other ships, was off Janaica. The Powtomack, which was the ship insured by the defendant, came to the place appointed on the 2d of June, and was no more than two miles from the Europa, and not above one mile from the sternmost ships ftion respecting the necessity of failing orders, on which very learned Judges had differed, he had no difficulty in giving his opinion. It feemed to him, in point of reason and common sense, where an underwriter contracted that a ship should fail with convoy, that that ship should be in such a situation of security as a convoy could impart to her. Now that was impossible, unless the Captain had received his instructions from the Admiral, to direct him in the course where protection extended. Without failing orders, he might be running away from protection.—Verdict for defendant.

Mr Law observed, that the principal question in this case would be, whether sailing orders were absolutely necessary? He stated the different opinions that had been entertained on that point, and admitted that the Captain, in this case, received no sailing orders, but did every thing in his power to get up with the Admiral for that purpose.

When the whole of this case was heard, Lord Kenyon was of opinion on the facts, that the plaintist had no cause of action. His Lordship said, as to the que-
